PARADISE of INNOCENCE presented by

URAN

AS THE ONLY 25 YEAR OLD IN CLASS 5-3, I'M OLD ENOUGH TO APPRECIATE THE KIND OF "PARADISE" I'LL FIND THERE.

Shouta made a quantum leap back to his elementary school days while still retaining his memories as a 25 year old man. There he gets into all sorts of entanglements with the girls who were once so out of his reach as adults.

EXTRA PARADISE② End

Afterword

I would like to thank you all for buying Mujaki no Rakuen, Volume 3. Thanks to the last two volumes, a large number of people have come to know this series and are giving me their thoughts through letters, magazine surveys, over the net, or at sales events.

Of course, as it is to be expected, the thoughts people had about Mujaki no Rakuen were various indeed. Some of them are picky in terms of "I like this character" or "I liked it when this happened," some delve right into the nitty-gritty such as "It would be interesting if the story took this route" or "Wait, was that a flag event?", while others are exercises in self-insertion such as "This takes me back," "I'm so jealous," and "This tears me up inside." All of those sentiments are expressions of love, and they make me think "I'm so glad I'm authoring this series."

The series also gets reprimanded with comments such as "I don't like this series" or "I really expected better than this," and I'm happy to get them since those opinions provide valuable hints on what I should do for future series.

However, when I do come across those varying opinions, it is a fact that I begin to doubt myself. I start to think, "I have to create a series that's interesting and lives up to everybody's expectations." Whenever I find myself in that corner, that's when my supervising editor proves to be really reliable. Manga editors fulfill the very important double duties of professional producers and initial gateway readers who objectively direct the manga to where it needs to go, smooth out the rough edges, and provide yes or no answers whenever a mangaka is being wrongheaded or starts to get lost.

So have I really authored the type of silly manga I've been aiming for, the kind which is both sexy and fun? I've literally thrown myself into this manga from the time it began its serialization until now, but has the time come for me to step back and take a good look at where it's all going? Those were the doubts that had been swimming in my head, thanks in large part to the recent increase of people critiquing my series. I told my supervising editor about those doubts the other day at a meeting, and this is what he emphatically said:

"Uran-san, as long as you're having fun authoring the series, I guarantee you everything's going to be all right!"

I see... in that case all is right in the world! I'm having a whole lot of fun writing this series! All sorts of ideas keep coming to my head, it's like my girls are all standing in a line waiting for their turn to be put in the next chapter (lol). What I'm thinking these days is that I hope all you gentle readers out there will sense my enjoyment through every issue that comes out.
